Raising a Mensch in an Age of Entitlement

What we want most for our children and grandchildren is for them to be kind, decent human beings. Today's society offers many influences that actively work against this goal, allowing children to grow up in a world of instant gratification and constant distraction. Adult children often find themselves too busy to volunteer their time or to donate to others. In this session we will discuss some of our current challenges and explore concrete strategies we can bring to the children in our lives to help shape their character.

Presented by Lena Kushnir, Ed.D.

Lena Kushnir, Ed.D. has been in Jewish education for over 20 years. She began her career as a teacher at Sager Solomon Schechter Day School, later became the Director of Education, and spent six years as the school Principal. She is currently working as an independent consultant and leadership coach, working with day schools and religious schools throughout Chicagoland, as well as nationally. She is passionate about helping to shape our future generations into competent, compassionate and Jewishly-connected individuals.
